Grower Highlight - Nikolaihof Wachau, Austria

Savoury, detailed Riesling and Grüner Veltliner with a capacity to age that defies belief

Wine has been made on the Nikolaihof estate for over 1500 years, making it one of the oldest in Austria. The current owners, the Saahs family, have owned it since 1894, and have not used any chemicals or synthetic products in the vineyard or the winery since then. They have been practising biodynamic viticulture since 1971 - they are committed to their land, and the wines reflect this.

The below summation comes from the importer of these wines into the United States of America, and expresses just how special these wines are...

"Nikolaihof's wines are often incredibly thick, dense and uncompromisingly stony in character... Just give these wines time! They'll do everything for you that great wine can do, if you are patient. Early on you'll see their sheer intensity, but specific details can be lost in a monolith of concentration, an opacity that can be perplexing if you don't know what's ahead. Thus detailed tasting notes are difficult if you feel the need to delineate skeins of flavours with sequences of associations. Here you just stand on the prow and feel the wind and look at the swollen waves of vinosity and hope you aren't swept overboard. And hope you are. . . ."

Vin Jaune

The lonely rebel.

In the east of France, near the Swiss border, sits the oft-forgotten wine region of the Jura. Its most famous wine is one that only a handful of devotees have heard of. And yet it can age for centuries, is compatible with a diverse range of food, and can complex beyond imagining. It is dry, nutty, saline and fresh, yet simultaneously creamy and powerful.

Here, a North American wine retailer sums up this unique wine style :

"Vin Jaune flies in the face of viticultural orthodoxy.

It is a rebel, a wine that somehow miraculously weathers the slings and arrows of time to gain a depth and complexity that makes it unlike any other wine on Earth. Though the most obvious comparison is with Spain's oxidised Sherry, Vin Jaune is denser and more robust, and it also has a strong tail of acidity that Sherry simply does not.

Made from the pugnacious Savagnin grape, Vin Jaune is fermented like any other wine. But that's just the beginning. After the fermentation, the wine is stored in large barrels that are never completely filled and are basically abandoned (meaning they certainly aren't topped off) as the wine goes through a period of existentialist soul-searching for a minimum of six years and three months. It's lonely being a Vin Jaune.

As you can imagine, a tremendous amount of the wine evaporates over this time (angels drink well in the Jura). Here, legend has it that the squat 620 ml bottles - called clavelins - are all that remain of a litre of wine after its journey."

Grower Highlight - Pyramid Valley North Canterbury, New Zealand

The most exciting wines being made south of the equator? 2.2 tightly-planted hectares of biodynamically-tended Pinot Noir and Chardonnay, planted on clay-limestone, on scarp slopes.

Mike and Claudia Weersing proudly and humbly tend to a magical piece of earth at the northern end of the South Island of New Zealand. Everything is done by hand to bring the essence of this place into liquid form. Their wines show such energy and sheer vitality, as well as being purely delicious.

In addition, they work with like-minded growers from around New Zealand to make wines from other vineyards managed along the same lines as their own.

Their ethos is summed up neatly in an excerpt from their writings :

"Wine to us is a genie, genius loci; our job is to coax it from its rock bottle. Every gesture we make, in vineyard and winery, is a summons to this spirit of place. Biodynamics, hand-based viticulture, low yields, natural winemaking – these are some of the means we've adopted better to record and transmit this voice."

Grower Highlight - Domain Ponsot
Cotes de Nuits, France

Pinot Noir without peer, plus energetic whites of precise focus.

Founded in 1872, Domaine Ponsot has always been something of an pioneering enigma.

Whether it be the fact that they were one of the first estates to bottle their wines themselves (rather than through a negociant), or that they planted the lesser-known grape variety Aligoté in the early 1900s, when Chardonnay made more commercial and economic sense.

They eschew the use of sulphur and of new oak, preferring to ensure the wines speak only of the grapes and of the soil that they grew in.

Their Pinot Noirs, from grand sites up and down the Golden Slope of Burgundy, are aromatically detailed and supremely elegant. They are savoury, filled with subtlety and finesse, and are some of the most majestic examples of the grape.

The Aligoté is the benchmark for the variety, and comes from the unique Clos de Monts Luisants, the only premier cru vineyard in Burgundy to allow the production of this grape.

Grower Highlight - Castagna Beechworth, Victoria

Granite. Biodynamics. Wines that are the essence of Australia.

Julian Castagna is at the forefront of advocating biodynamic viticulture in Australia. He planted his eponymous Beechworth vineyard in 1997 and has not looked back. His wines are crafted to tell a story of the soil that the vines grew in. They are aromatic, detailed and ultimately Australian.

"Away back on the other side of last vintage I sat down at the laden table of the Castagna family at Beechworth, on the northern foothills of the Victorian Alps. To me, this is as good as wineries get. While I think about thirty of Australia's 2600 wineries make consistently brilliant wine, Castagna is as close to the top of that thirty as I would care to measure. Or could measure."
